

Edwin S. Cox, Ph.D.

Ed Cox, Ph.D. is President Emeritus of Phillips Graduate Institute, where he served from 1981 to 1999. An executive coach and an advisor to family businesses, Ed is a Vistage Chair. Vistage is the pre-eminent international organization for the personal and professional development of business owners, company presidents and CEOs. He has founded two CEO groups in California. Ed has had a unique combination of careers as a business leader in large and small organizations and as a behavioral scientist. After military service as an Army officer, Ed worked in a large multinational oil company, and then joined a start-up service company. As the CEO, Ed grew the company to be the largest in its industry. Concurrently, Ed became an internationally-renowned advisor for family businesses in a wide range of industries. This diverse background of industries and activities, combined with intensive experience as a board member, CEO, and CFO, with proven experience in leadership, strategic planning, conflict resolution, employee relations, company growth, and international consulting, has prepared Ed to bring wisdom and insight to a wide range of business issues. Ed holds a BA in Economics from UCLA; Ph.D. in Behavioral Science from USC; Executive Management training at the Anderson School at UCLA.
